The John Newport Preaching Collection

Former Baylor professor Dr. John P. Newport (1917-2000)<sup>1</sup> deepened and enriched my life development in the summer of 1968. One year before entering Baylor as a freshman, he invited me to travel as his official photographer for a six week around the world study tour he led. We circled the globe and from that time forged an enduring friendship. He supported me in pursuing a Ph.D. in homiletics, spoke at my pastoral installation services in congregations served, and recommended me to Oklahoma Baptist University as president where I worked prior to retirement. His academic credentialing, extensive authorship, higher education administration and scholarship, preaching skills, and warm relational personality endeared Dr. Newport to a generation of colleagues, students, scholars, and churches.

Newport completed one of his many degrees, a Ph.D., at the University of Edinburgh in 1953. During those post WWII years of scholarship, he managed to burrow through the stacks in used bookstores in Scotland foraging for and purchasing what he considered as one of the finest collections of Christian preaching in the English language at the time. With a few additional volumes added over his career, he cherished and utilized the timeless truths preached and written by these pulpit masters. They inspired his life and speaking. (Newport's handwritten notes in some volumes document select sermons used as starting points for his own preaching.) While serving as pastor of Broadmoor Baptist Church in Shreveport, Louisiana, he contacted me in 1993 and offered to sell me his entire homiletics collection. I embraced the opportunity, and for years benefitted personally and professionally from such a plentitude of preaching. With admiration for Dr. Newport and appreciation for Baylor University, my 1973 Baylor bride, Rhonda Evatt Brister, and I have given the entire collection to the Kyle Lake Center for Effective Preaching at the George W. Truett Theological Seminary in hopes the collection continues to encourage, energize, and educate preachers.
